

Jeffrey Hodges B.Sc.(AES) M.Sc.(Hons)

Metaprograms and Sex

For those NLPers who are fascinated by metaprograms, here is some information that has been withheld from general distribution. It comes to you from "Downunder #69"!

Sex and decision-making

- "Same": You're Homosexual.
- "Different" : You're Heterosexual.
- "Contextual": You're either Bisexual or Asexual.

Motivation for sex

- "Away-from-negative": You like to have sex after an argument.
- "Towards-positive": You like to argue after you have sex.
- "Contextual": You like to argue during sex.

Sex and time orientation

- "Past": When having sex, you make big, bright, colourful, close pictures of people from your past with whom you've had sex.
- "Present": When having sex, you imagine big, bright, colourful, close pictures of people from your future with whom you'd like to have sex.
- "Contextual": You like to have sex with them all right now. [These people tend to like orgies.]

Learning and sex

- "Form-content": You don't like oral sex.
- "Content-Form": You do like oral sex.
- "Contextual": You can't tell/see/feel whether you're having oral sex or not.

Sex and relationship

- "Self": You know sex is over when you've had an orgasm.
- "Other": You know sex is over when your partner has had an orgasm.
- "Contextual": You have trouble knowing when sex is over. [Such people may be recognized by the resulting friction burns.]